1. In early May, a Soviet-Mongolian military mission under a Russian general arrived in Kalgan to discuss problems of military agreements, mutual support and the division of stationing areas between Inner and Outer Mongolia as follows:

- Soviet Mongolia will issue modern weapons for training civilians in Chahar. This training is to be directed by three divisions of approximately 4500 [?] Soviet Mongolian troops.
- The Soviet Mongolians will designate stationing areas for Chinese Communist troops in Chahar, Suiyuan and along the Peking-Suiyuan Railroad.
- [? Inner] Mongolian banners will accept three to five Mongolian military advisors [? from Outer Mongolia].

[SSU Washington Note: It is assumed that reference to Soviet Mongolia means the Mongolian Peoples' Republic previously known as Outer Mongolia. This area was officially recognized as the Mongolian Peoples' Republic on 5 January 1946.]
